Rhodinol ex Geranium is a natural fraction obtained from geranium essential oil and is composed predominantly of naturally occurring fragrance constituents such as citronellol and geraniol.

When used as a fragrance ingredient, this material is not itself prohibited or restricted under the IFRA Standards (51st Amendment). Its use is permitted provided that the finished fragrance compound complies with the applicable IFRA Standards for the intended product category, including all restrictions relating to naturally occurring constituents.

Compliance of the finished fragrance depends upon:
